

Great Ideas for Living Dirt Cheap

Cheap Eating

I

A lot of friends and acquaintances ask me how I save so much money and stay in great shape without even working out. The answer is always profoundly simple and always catches them off guard. Whenever I give them the plan to do it, they end up saving 300 dollars a month, minimum. If you want to save hundreds of dollars per month (or per week depending on your habits), as well as get in great shape, here is exactly how I do it:

You've got to cook meals at home using some key ingredients from grocery stores that you need to start picking up. For example - if you grab a drink at a coffee shop or Starbucks in the morning, and get a crappy fast food meal on the way to, or back from work, you'll already save 300 dollars (and your health) by switching it up. Here are they key ingredients you need to work it:

Beans (canned, any variety you enjoy)
Eggs
Bread
Tomato sauce (pasta sauce, jarred or canned)
Pasta
Oil (olive oil or canola oil)

Basic spices, such as salt, pepper, oregano, basil, etc.
Vegetables that are ON SALE, such as potatoes, onions, peppers, etc.
Meat (beef, chicken breasts, drumsticks, thighs, etc., fish) that are ON SALE

You'll need to wake up 10 minutes earlier to make breakfast - but the money you'll save adds up to a few DAYS of work per month. Here are some basics you can make with eggs: hardboiled (almost no effort), scrambled, over easy, fried, poached, omelet (using any variety of veggies). Pop in some toast, and you have a solid and healthy breakfast costing about 50 cents. If you make a bad processed microwave or oven-ready breakfast, or grab something on the way to work, in addition to Starbucks or some other coffee chain, you'll already save 300 per month just on one meal of the day by switching it up.

For lunch you have a lot of options if you pre-make the meal and bring it to the office. You can slap pan-fried chicken breasts on bread with veggies and your choice of dressing, all for around a dollar for a delicious and healthy meal. You can make pasta and bring it in Tupperware. It's up to you.

For dinner, you can make any meat you picked up along with sautéed vegetables, steamed broccoli, potatoes, anything really. It's up to your imagination. Cooking instead of popping in some microwaveable or processed pre-made dinner will save you 5 dollars per meal.

These changes will not only have you shedding several pounds per week (without even being hungry), but you'll gain valuable cooking skills, and will save between 300-600 dollars per month depending on how you eat right now. That's enough for a luxury car lease, or enough to pay for some of or all of your rent. Any of my friends that have stuck with this shower me in thanks - the money comes out of thin air in a way, and they can enjoy using it on other more important things, not fast food they take for granted anyway.

With living costs rising at a seemingly constant rate, simple, everyday expenses are getting more and more difficult to accommodate, and many people are finding their budgets getting tighter than ever. While there are plenty of areas people can trim their budgets, such as spending on entertainment or shoe shopping, the rising costs of necessary items like food and gasoline make it harder and harder for people to cut enough spending elsewhere in their budgets to accommodate the increased expense of these everyday necessities. And despite the need, it's simply unrealistic to eliminate all extraneous spending in order to make room for the ever-increasing expense of groceries and gasoline.

Thankfully, with a little budgetary reorganization, some planning, and a dash of creativity, you can maximize your food budget to make sure you get the best value for your dollar. Here are a few tips to help you spend wisely at the grocery store, and stretch your food budget as far as possible.

Plan ahead

All too often, people approach grocery shopping with an impulse-buy mentality. "I'll just go see what's on sale," is an extremely ineffective approach to grocery shopping. Sit down with a cookbook and plan your meals at least a week in advance. Scheduling meals out in advance will allow you to maximize your food spending, as you can organize meals by primary ingredients, using them from one day to the next. Also, planning ahead will help you avoid impulse buys when you get to the store. Make a list and stick to it.

Buy in bulk

The larger quantities you're able to buy, the more you'll save. While memberships at wholesale discount clubs aren't cheap, they pay for themselves almost immediately in big savings. Buying items like individually packaged frozen meats, toilet paper, paper towels, laundry detergent, etc., is significantly more cost effective than buying these items in smaller amounts at your local grocery.

Keep it simple

Sticking to simple, basic ingredients is a great way to save at the grocery store. Creative recipes and exotic spices can make even the simplest items (chicken breasts, for example) a culinary treat. So skip the fillet and get creative with your recipes. You'll still eat well, and your budget will go much farther.

Be prudent with produce

While buying in bulk is great for some items, it's rarely wise when it comes to produce and other perishables. Less is more when it comes to items that have a shorter shelf life. When buying produce, only buy what you're certain you'll use. This will help you avoid unnecessary waste, and will help you save money.

Keep it close to home

Eating out is one of the fastest ways to blow through your food budget. Between overpriced meals, drinks, tax, and tip, it's extremely difficult to get enough value in a meal out to justify it over eating in. Sure, there's more work involved in cooking for yourself, but it's significantly more cost effective. Save eating out for special occasions only, and you'll find your food budget will go much farther.

We sure do hear a lot about saving money these days. In fact, budget cooking is one of the top food trends for 2009. Whether due to necessity, lifestyle changes, a desire for simpler living - whatever the reason - cheap living is really catching on! The good news is that learning how to cook is actually a key ingredient in this new, more budget-wise lifestyle. When you understand basic cooking method, you are well-prepared to create wonderful meals at home, saving money at the same time.

Prepare in Bulk

If you know how to prepare meat (chicken, beef, pork) quickly and efficiently, it makes sense to buy your favorite meats in larger quantities when they are on sale. Trim and prepare the meat, portioning it into serving sizes. Label and date each package and put each portion into the freezer. Now, when you are ready to prepare dinner some night, just take out a portion and prepare it using your favorite cooking method with your favorite ingredients. This budget cooking tip actually saves time AND money!

Celebrate at Home

Going out to a restaurant to celebrate a special occasion is always a treat, but it does have its drawbacks. For starters - if you want to enjoy a bottle of wine, expect to pay somewhere around 2 1/2 times as much as you would buying the same bottle at a store (and that's before tip!) But... when you know how to apply basic cooking methods to great ingredients - you can create very high caliber meals right at home. And you can do this quickly, easily... and cheaply! This can also justify using the highest quality ingredients you can find and afford. You'll still be saving money by toasting your occasion... at home.

Tough Love with the Tenderloin

When the warm weather comes, everyone likes to break out the BBQ grill. And many of those faithful grillers are longing for one thing - a perfectly cooked steak - maybe even the filet mignon! So how can you stop dreaming about this beauty and make it a reality without breaking the bank? A great simple solution for saving money on filet mignon is to purchase the entire beef tenderloin and break it down yourself. You remove the chain (the fatty muscle along the side), the head and the tail and then cut equally portioned steaks from there. I've paid as little as $40 and gotten 9 beautiful 3.5 oz steaks! Watch for sales and be willing to do a little work yourself - and this steak dream can be your reality, too.

The not so Obvious

It might seem obvious, but the best way to save money on your food bill is to eat less, right? Well, the actual truth of the matter is that most of what is cooked is not eaten and goes to waste. A great way to save money is actually to make less - not necessarily eat less. Portioning is a secret of basic cooking method and a great way to save money. This is because most home cooks over-produce food rather than run the risk of running out of food, which everyone hates to do. However, if you portion correctly on the preparation side, you will save money and have another added bonus: proper portioning also ensures you will not have to even worry about leftovers. So you've solved another common budget cooking dilemma - what to do with leftovers? There won't be any!

Once you've mastered a few basic cooking methods and simple techniques for preparing great food, you'll find it to be a very simple and rewarding way to incorporate budget cooking into your frugal lifestyle.

Entertainment

I

You don't have to spend a lot of money to have a fun family night (or day) out. Here are a few ideas for cheap and free entertainment fun for the whole family:

1. Movie Night at Home. With the popularity of Redbox and other movie box rental machines, it is now easy to rent dvd's at your local grocery stores, drug stores, and gas stations for only $1 a night. Grab a family friendly flick, pop up some popcorn, and enjoy an inexpensive evening at home together!
2. Picnic in the Park - Make some sandwiches, pack some juice boxes, and head off to the nearest park for a picnic. Take a Frisbee, ball, or kite and the whole family can enjoy some fresh air and exercise together.
3. Watch for Free or Discounted Admission - Many zoos, museums, or science centers have discounted or free days. Be on the look out for these bargains. Or, if there is a place you like to frequent as a family, you should consider buying a family membership. It's much cheaper plus it's usually tax deductible!

Bank of America currently offers free admission for their customers the first weekend of every month to hundreds of zoos, museums, etc. Just check their website for details. There are frequently offers like this out there. My local grocery store always has discounted tickets to the State Fair, Water Parks, and Amusement Parks.

4. Check out Local Cultural Events - Hit the rodeo, the Greek Festival, or whatever else happens to be going on in town at the moment. They are usually free or inexpensive to get in to and the whole family while get to experience a little culture!

5. Parades! - Everybody loves them. They are fun, entertaining, and free! Be on the lookout for them as they can be scattered throughout the year but are especially popular around holidays (think Memorial Day, Fourth of July, Thanksgiving, etc.)

6. Nature Hike - Take the family on a nature hike. Have fun watching for birds, animals, and unusual insects and gathering pine cones, leaves, and other treasures together. It's a great way to get some exercise and spend some quality time together as a family.

This is just a few of the things you can do together as a family that won't cost a lot of money. There are dozens more out there. Your local newspaper is probably the best source for ideas. Also be on the lookout for discounts and coupons to establishments you like to frequent.

II

The holidays are just around the corner and it seems that many folks end up spending more dollars in entertainment this time of year. So we wanted to give you some tips on entertainment cost cutting. The most important tip is to have a monthly budgeted amount. If you spend without a cap in mind (budgeted amount) you WILL always over spend. Other ways to cut on entertainment are:

- When restaurant chains offer the buy "x" amount in gift certificates and get a $5 or $10 one free...Do it! Especially if it is a restaurant you frequent often. Each holiday season we buy certificates for gifts or for ourselves and get the free gift certificates.
- Instead of meeting for lunch or dinner meet earlier for coffee, or later for desert. This could be a minimum of a $10 savings.
- Entertain in groups, don't meet 3 or 4 times with individual friends or family members, have group lunch or dinner. The fewer number of times you go out...the less you'll spend.
- Utilize the early bird specials, going earlier can save you from 15% and more.
- Entertain at home, have everyone bring a dish this could result in a savings of hundreds of dollars for the season.
- Take advantage of the FREE concerts and shows offered in your area by schools, park districts, groups, etc.
- Use the "Entertainment" coupon book in your area, go to entertainment.com and see if the value is there for you.
- Meet during "Happy Hour" when they typically serve free food.

These are just a few ideas that could add up to hundreds of dollars in savings for you and still allow you to catch up with friends and family. Don't forget www.restaurant.com, where you can buy gift certificates at a discounted rate to the restaurants of your choosing; this is also a great gift idea. Remember that most important is setting an entertainment budget, without one your holidays will come back to haunt you in the New Year.

Housing

I

When the economy is bleak , when the stock market has crashed, when job losses are at bay then you indeed need something which provides the real value for your money. In fact these days it is not that hard to find people almost drowned in debt. With this daunting economy, with this patchy stock market and with the abundance of the concept of pink slips it is a peculiar situation now where the threat of foreclosure looms large. And when the wolves are at bay all that is required is something bolder , something much secured and yes something much cheaper to live and stay on. This is exactly when the mobile home for sale or the mobile parks for sale stays as an affordable option to bank on.

In fact this is perhaps the best time to save money and the concept of mobile home for sale stays as a concept doing its share, in offering the best value for the dollars. Quite ideally therefore a successful market for the mobile park for sale has been observed. This has somewhat drastically outdated the age-old concept of home construction owing to the cost effectiveness , safety and comfort that it tends to provide.

The enormous growth of the idea of mobile homes or manufactured homes nowadays the mobile homes, mobile home parks, and the single wide manufactured homes remains as quite the dependable options in living cheaply. What has almost immediately developed is the new market for mobile home investing and as a obvious result a booming market for, used Mobile Homes for Sale, cheap mobile homes for sale, modular homes sales have been observed. The market for manufactured homes is now pretty buoyant when it comes to the point of living cheaply yet comfortably.

Yes, you got it right there is a style factor too. The mobile home parks or the mobile homes also provide you the immense flexibility to live on your own terms. Be it for living at phoenix to stay out of the chilling cold of Oregon now you have one option to rely on and that is to invest on the mobile homes. Yes, you can now have one home at Phoenix and another at Oregon and live your life on your own terms.

II

So you want really cheap housing? Whether you are buying or renting, here are five ways to find a home that costs you less. Those are followed by a list of the real expenses you need to compare your options fairly.

If you can live where you like, you can start by looking at towns where houses or apartments cost less, and cut your housing costs by as much as half or more. For example, an apartment which rents for $500 in Tucson, Arizona might be $1,500 in New York or San Francisco. A house you would have to pay $400,000 for in California might be $120,000 in many other cities.

Once you know which city you'll be living in, find the neighborhoods where prices or rents are lowest. If they aren't clearly unsafe or otherwise undesirable, start your search here. Only move on if you can't find what you need after carefully looking at what is for sale there.

Some types of housing are cheaper than others. Normally mobile homes on property are the cheapest options for buying or renting (although I have seen exceptions). Beyond that, the relative value of various types of houses can vary a lot in different cities. In some, classic old houses are valued more than new homes, while in other towns they're seen for the trouble they are and priced lower. Start cheap and work your way up if you don't find what you want.

There are often just plain good deals that can be found in any area or with any type of home. Putting a price on homes (or setting rents) isn't an exact science, and some sellers won't even use what decent tools are available for this, so keep your eyes open for an under-priced house. If you're willing to deal with a fixer upper, this could mean paying $20,000 less to buy a home that needs just a couple thousand in repairs and deferred maintenance.

Also, you can always offer less than the asking price. Learn a few good negotiating tactics if you are going to be talking to the sellers yourself. Otherwise you can make a bunch of low offers to see if one of them is accepted by a seller. If your first ten are rejected without a counter-offer, though, you might need to adjust your sights.

How To Compare Housing Costs

Don't make the mistake of thinking finding cheap housing is all about the lowest price or monthly rental charge. A house for $10,000 less may mean paying $60 to $90 less per month on the mortgage, but if it means driving 10 miles more to and from work, and your car costs 30-cents-per-mile to operate, that's an extra $120 per month right there. Look at the following when comparing options:

- Loan costs. A higher interest rate on a small house may make the payments higher than those on a lower-interest owner-financed home which costs more. Consider the interest costs.
- Home owner insurance. Really cheap housing may not be so cheap if you have to pay more because of old heating systems or being in a flood or earthquake area.
- Taxes. A block or two can be dramatic in the cost of property taxes, depending on whether you are in or out of the city or township.
- Car expenses. It is not only your job, but also stores that can be further away if you are too far out of the city. Estimate your monthly car expenses based on the location and your habits.
- Gas, electric and other utilities. Your heating bill can be twice as high on a drafty old house versus a new energy-efficient one. Consider electricity, water, sewer and garbage collection expenses too.
- Repairs. Some homes are truly ready to live in without any work needed. Try to estimate the next three-year's repairs and divide by 36 to get a monthly figure to compare.
- Other regular costs. Does the home, condo or apartment have association dues? How about special assessments, snow removal costs or lawn care expenses?

Write down any and all expenses for each home you consider, so you can meaningfully compare them. Estimate as closely as you can if no records are available, and find a monthly average total for each. In this way you can see which are really cheap housing options.

III

My own interest in cheap housing ideas started because I never liked having a job, or working too many hours per week. I worked full time for perhaps just nine months in my life (I'm 43), so it was necessary at times to keep my expenses low. My first house was a mobile home on a small lot in a Northern Michigan town. The $257 payments were easy enough for a while, but I paid off the mortgage early during an unusual period of 30-hour work weeks (almost full time for me).

However, I wasn't just a buyer of cheap housing - I was also a supplier. I rented the other rooms in the mobile home. In this way I lived for free and even had a little extra income after paying the household bills. I also built a shed for $250, carpeted it and put in a light, and then rented it out at times for $50 per week - now that's a good ROI (return on investment).

In Mexico, when I was 17 years old, a group of factory workers gave me a ride and let me spend the night in their extra bunk (I was hitchhiking). They had a futuristic plastic apartment, big enough for four bunk beds and not much more. In the bathroom, the floor, toilet and bath tub were all made out of one continuous piece of molded plastic. Outside, the grounds had tennis courts, as well as cement paths with benches, that wound through flower beds.

An efficiently designed 300-square-foot apartment works for single young people. If such construction was allowed in some parts of the United States (there was only one door and other code issues) these kinds of apartments could probably really solve some problems. With twenty of them on a small property, an investor could make money renting them out for $240 per month, utilities included. Split between four single young men or women, this would be just $60 each, or $15 per week. That's really cheap housing.

Other Cheap Housing Ideas

In those places where there is no big snow-load to worry about, tent-style housing, like that used on the Mongolian plains might be okay. Normal walls and roofs cost a lot, but insulated fabric would be a fraction of the cost. Even if it needed to be replaced every 12 years it might cost a lot less than using traditional walls and roofs.

There was an indoor ice rink in our local park for years before I noticed that its roof was held up by air pressure alone. It worked well enough, which makes me wonder if this kind of construction might be used for houses too. Think inflatable houses...

How about 10-by-12-foot cube-rooms that fit together easily in many different ways? A buyer starts with a bathroom cube, a kitchen cube and a bedroom cube, and then add more as he can afford to. Having them pre-made with a uniform design would keep the costs low. The electrical would be built-in and ready to plug into the next cube-room.

My friend was thrown out of the home he built on his own land, because it wasn't large enough to meet the county building code. We discovered however, that it would have been legal for him to camp on his property in an Recreational Vehicle, even if it was smaller than his shack. This makes me wonder if an entrepreneur could buy 40 used RVs for $4,000 each, put them on a piece of land, and then rent them to low income tenants. Just call it "camping," and this cheap housing idea might be okay with authorities.

Buying Wholesale

I

Everybody loves buying - clothes, shoes, flowers, electronics, games and other things. Most people do not even care about how much money it will cost them just to purchase the things they need and want.

In addition of course, everybody loves to get a good deal, though some people are better in getting great deals than others. Perhaps you are asking why? It is because, some people are able to purchases everything that they want from clothes and body jewelry down to furniture and other accessories at the lowest price possible.

Clever people purchase things wholesale. Purchasing wholesale items is not really that difficult like it is often believed. Wondering how people can do it? Read the follow secrets:

1. Ignite your commercial glow

Purchasing wholesale always means purchasing in bulk or large volumes. Like for instance, you find a beautiful pair of leather pants at wholesale prices, so you have to purchase at least a dozen or two to get a good price.

You can begin a small business by selling the extras of item that you have bought to earn additional profits and obtain great deals for yourself as well. Your small business ideas can include online auctions, having a small shop on a flea market, or ask your friend and associates to purchase your extras.

2. Cover your foundations

This will legalize you business. Wholesalers will ask you to get a copy of your resale license, so complete all the important requirements in order for you to get one. Usually, laws in most states differ. Most states do not charge applicants who are applying for a resale license while others charge a small fee.

In most states, the propositions of getting a resale license is that you are required to file yearly reports and pay sales taxes for products you sold in your state. Some states may even ask you to get a business license. So make sure you are aware of the requirements you will need to get your business started.

3. Register for top trade shows

If you are residing in a city, it is possible that your city is hosting a number of top trade shows every year. If you are in search for different clothing available at wholesale prices, it will be an absolute advantage if you have a resale license.

Usually, trade shows showcases several clothing lines that feature the newest fashions at wholesale prices. The minimum purchase required is in general very small, and you can sell some of the extras or offer it as a gift.

There are also trade shows for almost all items, from footwear to pet treats, from furniture to bags. These shows are normally the best places to purchase wholesale items.

4. Look for liquidators

These are the ones who usually purchase huge volumes of products straight from the manufactures and retailers. The products may consist of anything from underwear to spare parts.

Normally, liquidators buy from companies that went out of business or products sold are from the past season. This is why you can buy from them at wholesale prices or even below.

5. Search for wholesalers on the internet

If you do not want to get a resale license but still want to purchase items in volumes, there are many wholesalers available on the internet. Go to your favorite search engine and type in "wholesale suppliers". You will be surprised how many results you will get.

Just follow these secrets and you will be saving yourself from spending too much money from retail stores.

II

Whether you already have a business or you want to start a business of your own, you can benefit by purchasing products or supplies that are needed through wholesalers. Buying wholesale is a great idea, and wholesalers have much to offer businesses today. However, it is important that you understand what a wholesaler actually is, the benefits of buying wholesale, and how you can start your own business with wholesale products. First of all, you may be wondering what a wholesaler is.

Basically they are a company that acts as a person in between the manufacturer and yourself. Wholesalers have huge amounts of stock and this allows them to charge you prices that are low for the products that you need. However, you will want to purchase fairly large quantities if you want to get the best competitive prices. Going with wholesale products from wholesalers is a great way to get a deal, especially if you are not already dealing directly with a manufacturer.

Benefits of Buying Wholesale

If you decide to go looking for the best wholesale deals, you'll no doubt find that there are many great benefits to buying wholesale. Here are just a few of the great benefits you'll enjoy when you decide to make your purchases from wholesalers today.

- Benefit #1 - Get a Better Price - One of the main benefits that you'll enjoy when purchasing products wholesale is that you will be able to save quite a bit of money. I

It's pretty much a proven fact that almost every woman in this world loves to dress up! But did you know that dressing up does not really require you to spend as much money as you think? There are several ways how you can be fashionable on a budget, especially since there are tons of online stores that sell cheap clothing. Read on to find out how to snag the latest deals in fashion.

1. Familiarize yourself with the latest and the best brands of clothing online. Do your research by reading fashion blogs and browsing fashion sites. These sites will often recommend online stores that sell the dresses or clothing that they feature.
2. Before you decide to shop from any of these online stores, make sure that you have an idea in mind of how much you are willing to spend for your clothing. Choose an online store that sells high quality clothing but at a very affordable price.
3. Find out when an online store will be having a sale. You will know this by visiting their sites, or by reading fashion blogs. Online stores sometimes ask bloggers to write about their upcoming sales, so be sure to find out when they will happen.

4. Buy cheap clothing that you would find yourself wearing, or something that you know looks good on you. Although there are several online stores that offer returns and exchanges, some of them will not shoulder the cost of shipping for returning the item back. So to avoid this, make sure that you shop only for clothing that is sure to fit well on you.

5. If you don't mind wearing slightly used clothing but in good condition, then consider shopping from auction stores like EBay and Amazon. You will surely find several cheap clothing items here, and sometimes, these sites sell brand new clothing at a very low price.

6. Make sure that you shop for cheap clothing only from reputable online clothing stores. This is to avoid scams or fraudulent transactions, especially since this process involves giving out your credit card information. The best way to know if such online store can be trusted is by reading reviews written by their customers.

7. Look for websites that are specifically put up to sell cheap clothing online. There are so many of them, you just have to look through them thoroughly. You will surely find very affordable clothing online that is of high quality if you go to these sites. But, you should not focus on only one site, for there are always other online stores that sell similar yet more affordable clothing. Compare the prices as well as the quality of the clothes that they sell and choose the best.

If you are on a tight budget but in need of decent clothing to wear, either for work or for partying with friends, then your best option is to go online. Although you can find a lot of thrift stores in your locality that sell cheap clothing, going to each of these stores could take up a lot of your time. So if you are a busy person and do not want to spend most of your time roaming around town looking for the best dress to wear, then you better start shopping online now!

It might seem like a bit of mad thing to do but increasing number of women are turning away from buying new clothes, instead opting for vintage and second hand. This is sometimes due to economic factors, sometimes due to environmental considerations and sometimes because they are fed up of the same styles of clothing that are in the shops.

There are a number of benefits to wearing second hand clothes including the reduction of waste and landfill, saving money and looking a bit different to everyone else. Buying clothes from the usual high street shops could lead to looking just like everyone else. Wearing second hand and vintage clothes opens up a whole new world of shopping with a massive variety and choice of clothes that are likely to be a bit different to everyone else.

If you do decide to never wear new clothes again, you will need to plan and prepare, whilst second hand and vintage clothes shopping is great fun and very rewarding, it can take a little time. The key to finding great second hand and vintage clothing is knowing what styles will suit you and picking out the real quality and well-made pieces. Second hand clothes can be subject to a little wear and tear so it is important to check each piece carefully and be aware of what is acceptable to you and what is not. Some damage can be easily repaired e.g. missing buttons or a tear along a seam, other damage like mildew or tear in an obvious place will not be so easy to correct.

Second hand clothes shopping is not just a hobby, it is a way of life. You will probably not find everything you want or need in one shopping trip and you will need to constantly search every where that you go for pieces that you love. Prices and quality of second hand clothes will vary depending on where you shop, but it is probably best to look in as many different places as possible to maximise your chance of finding the clothes that you need. Jumble sales, car boot sales, dress agencies, vintage shops, charity shops, specialist fairs or markets, second hand clothing websites and classified ads are all great hunting ground for second hand clothes.

Always have some sort of idea about what you want and need but also be a bit flexible, you are sure to find something that is not on your list that you completely fall in love with and just have to have.

1. It helps to reduce waste - any used and unwanted clothing that is bought is clothing that will not be disposed of in landfill. Landfill is a huge problem in the UK and also contributes to global warming by producing greenhouse gases.
2. They cost less than new items - a piece of clothing in a charity shop, car boot sale or second hand clothing website will almost certainly cost a fraction of it's original new price.
3. You will get much better quality and even designer clothes for the same price as low quality new clothes.
4. It is great fun shopping for second hand clothes and the thrill of finding something amazing that costs next to nothing is much better than shopping for new.
5. By shopping for second hand clothes in charity shops, you can help to support the charity and it's valuable work.
6. Second hand clothes are bit different to the usual clothes that you can buy on the high street, you are a lot less likely to see someone wearing the same clothes as you if you wear second hand.
7. There is a huge choice of second hand clothes available from a variety of places including car boot sales, charity shops, vintage shops and websites so there is no reason why you won't be able to find exactly what you want.
8. Shopping for used clothing forces you to think more carefully about what you buy so you usually end up with a very stylish outfit that looks amazing on you.

9. Buying second hand clothes is a great way to experiment with new styles and looks. As the clothes are not expensive as buying new it is less risky and if you make a mistake you can always sell or swap it.

10. Buying second hand clothes instead of new reduces the environmental impacts that are associated with the manufacture of new clothes.

So buying used clothing is not only good for the environment, it is also good for your and for your wallet. Your wardrobe will also look better for a few carefully chosen pre loved clothes. Why not give it a try, you will probably be very surprised at what you find?
